

SERIES DESCRIPTION

This learning series equips health providers with culturally respectful strategies to support Native American clients. Full attendance is required to earn 12 CEUs. Completion earns a certificate and CEUs.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this series, participants will:

- Understand the lasting effects of historical trauma on Native American mental health and substance use.
- Explore the importance of culturally sensitive approaches to opioid treatment in Native communities.
- Learn Native health policies and the interplay between tribal, state, and federal systems.
- Identify culturally responsive concepts, terminology, and frameworks tailored to Native American approaches.
- Gain skills to apply culturally appropriate protocols for engaging with tribal communities.
- Utilize interventions for addressing mental health, substance use disorders, and suicide prevention.
- Develop actionable plans to implement culturally respectful practices in collaboration with peers.

APPLY BY JAN 20TH, 2025

Application:

Apply by January 20, 2025. Selected participants will be notified by January 24 with access details. Applications are reviewed first-come, based on eligibility. Completion does not guarantee acceptance.

1ST SESSION BEGINS
FEBRUARY 11, 2025 @
11:00 AM - 1:00 PM PST

VENUE: ZOOM MEETING

6 Week Virtual Learning Series:

- February 11, 2025
- February 25, 2025
- March 11, 2025
- March 25, 2025
- April 8, 2025
- April 22, 2025

Times: 11:00 am to 1:00 pm
Pacific Time

FREE TO REGISTER

Presenter: Dr. Crystal Lee | Diné (Navajo)

Dr. Crystal Lee, Founder/CEO of United Natives and Assistant Professor at the University of New Mexico - College of Population Health. She is a leader in Native American health, policy, and advocacy. Recognized by USA Today & Scientific American for her health impact, A Diné (Navajo) member, Dr. Lee holds advanced degrees in Public Health and Indigenous Peoples Law, has advised U.S. presidents, and serves on the UN Indigenous Caucuses. Learn more at unitednatives.org.

REGISTER HERE